Welcome to MySPIE
This application is used by authors for abstract and manuscript submissions. It is also used by Chairs and Technical Committees in the review process.

To submit an abstract:
Please find the right fit for your presentation by browsing the conferences with open Calls for Papers \(http://spie.org/calls\). After choosing your conference and clicking "Submit an abstract" you will return to this page. Sign in or create a new account from the link above.

For abstract questions, please contact the Conference Program Coordinator for the specific meeting, or email abstract_help@spie.org

To submit a manuscript:
You will be notified by email when MySPIE is open for manuscript submission. After you receive email notification, sign in or create a new account from the link above, and find the link to "Submit manuscript".

For manuscript questions, please contact your Staff Proceedings Coordinator, or email author_help@spie.org

Manuscript abstracts should be approximately 250 words. Please submit your full manuscript (6-12 pages in length) in the next step of this submission.

In this paper, we theoretically investigate the THz detection in nonresonant Fresnel phase matching GaAs crystal. According to calculation, the method will contribute to increase the conversion efficiency and tunability of the THz detection. And compared with the traditional QPM (quasi-phase-match) condition, the difficult processing of the multiple-bonded, orientation-patterned GaAs plates can be ignored. All of these give a possible option to achieve sensitive, broad tunable, low-repetition Terahertz detection.
